An Inspirational Year Topped by Ethics Award

Terry Shanley,
SMART CEO

SMART intervenes at a critical stage in a child's development, nurturing a love for reading and teaching kids to be enthusiastic about books. Educators agree that our program reinforces reading and language skills learned in the classroom. In fiscal year 2009, SMART volunteers shared the joy of reading with 7,244 kids.

Support for the SMART mission plays out every day, though has never been more evident than in this past fiscal year. In the face of a challenging economic climate, what SMART experienced is what makes Oregon great. We witnessed communities gathering together to ensure local children continued to receive the individual reading support provided by SMART. Because of our dedication to the mission, SMART received the 2009 Oregon Ethics in Business award in the nonprofit category. It has truly been inspirational.

Though the year was challenging we balanced the budget thanks to the generous contributions of individuals, businesses and foundations throughout the state. My sincere thanks goes to our board of directors and staff for their energy and positive approach to finding solutions, and most importantly to our volunteers for ensuring SMART's continued success. But there's more work to be done.

The fact remains that if children don't learn to read by third grade they can't read to learn. In Oregon, 37 percent of eighth graders read below grade level. By intervening early, and reaching as many kids as possible, we can help lower that percentage.

Coupled with changes made in fiscal year 2008, I am confident that now SMART is right-sized and has the ability, once the recession ebbs, to grow to meet the need. With your ongoing support, we will reach our vision of an Oregon where every child can read and is empowered to succeed.

Thank you for helping Oregon kids live literate,

Terry Shanley
